TIRED OF LIFE IN PRISON

Case To Be Settled Under Comity Rules Instead of Treaties, Leaving Him But Little Hope of Escape.

Guadalajara, Mex., Dec. 12.-Kratz Friday made the announcement that in case the department of foreign relations and chief executive approve the finding of Judge Roias favorable to extradition he will not fight the case further, as at first intended, as that would mean at least two months more in tail for him, and he is heartily sick of confinement.

If the government's desire is to release him he says he will go back and face the whole thing out. He says his patience and forbearance are about exhausted, and if pressed too hard he declares he will make things warm for persons in high political circles.

Kratz declares his mind is unalterably made up. Neither persuasions of friends nor entreaties of his family, he says, can prevent his following out his determination should he not be liberated by order of the department of foreign relations reversing the decision of Judge Rojas.

Chief of Detectives Desmond was just on the point of boarding a train to return to the states last night when, hearing of the new turn in the case, he canceled his Pullman reservation and decided to remain here for further instructions.

Castanos, Kratz' attorney, departed Friday for Mexico City to use all his power with the department and the chief executive on behalf of his client. On this appeal Kratz will base his final

Will Be Turned Over to Desmond. City of Mexico, Dec. 12.-The documents in the Kratz case were received Thursday night by the department of foreign relations. They are a voluminous lot of papers, which must be gone over thoroughly and afterward referred to the president of the republic. Minister Mariscal, following the death of his wife, resumed his duties yesterday, and will give the case his personal attention.

It is believed the order for the delivery of the accused to the United States will be sent before the close of next week, when the prisoner will be turned over to Chief Dsemond, who was appointed by the president of the United States as his special commissioner.

The accident meant life or death to teliberation the engineers and firemen umped from their cabs to the ground The mail car attached to the passenger train was telescoped, and the three clerks, Russell McCormick, of Nashville, Tenn.; W. Spickard and H. Wagenthal, of Nashville, Ill., clung to the sides of the car as it toppled down a 20-foot embankment. Spickard and McCormick received outs on the face, but otherwise the mail clerks escaped uninjured. In jumping from his engine, Clarence Shaw, fireman on the passenger train, was painfully bruised about the face and body. Lifting himself to his feet, and without waiting for a physician, he started for his home.

Fireman Badly Bruised. "Just so none of the passengers are burt I'll not worry about myself," were the words of the fireman to those who tendered him sympathy. That the collision did not completely derail both trains is inexplicable to the men who witnessed it.

Passengers Rudely Shaken Up. All of the passengers were badly shaken up, and some of them were thrown in a heap to the floor. The women screamed in their fright, and for a few moments the strongest nerves gave way. The Louisville & Nashville train consisted of three passenger coaches, a mail car, three sleepers and a bag gage and express car. The freight train was made up of four coal cars. The Iron Mountain was going east on the in-bound tracs and the passenger was coming west. Near Third street and St. Clair avenue is a half-mile curve. Around this the passenger train was speeding when the freight came into view. The trains were just 20 yards apart. It was too late to stop. The engines are almost a total wreck, the collision piling them one upon the other.
